The first section of this impressive print volume: Periodicals (pp. xxiii-xciii) is an exceptionally wide-ranging listing of philological, linguistic and cultural journals worldwide – a valuable reference source in itself. In the main text (pp. 1-1087) entries conform in format, except for some minor details, to the rules of the International Standard Bibliographic Description (ISBD) of the International Federation of Library Associations (IFLA). This polyglot bibliography, with entry titles in hundreds of languages, is blessedly, made readily accessible by editorial addition of English translations in many (but not all) entries. Every facet of the literature of linguistics is covered; every continent; every language family; every linguistic discipline. The extent of many sections may surprise insular readers (e.g. Polish (pp. 684-801)). Of particular interest are the sections on Pidgins and Creoles (pp. 1081-5) and on Sign Languages (pp. 1086-7). Index of Names (pp. 1089-1220); Index of Languages (pp. 1221-40); Index of Subjects (pp. 1241-82) – all thoroughly cross-referenced to alternative forms and usages – are really exemplary, and hugely enhance the utility of the Bibliography.

The Permanent International Committee of Linguists and publisher Brill deserve our wholehearted praise for continuing and enhancing this splendid annual – essential for university libraries either in print or online – and for the welcome developments to the online service. Bravo!
